

JERSEY CLERGY WILL MARCH ON THE DEMON RUM

February 2 Is Designated as
Day of Prayer for Local Option.

APPEAL FROM PULPITS.

Ministers Believe That Greater Part of State Would Become "Dry."

Every Protestant church in New Jersey is preparing to descend on the Demon Rum. It is probable that whiskey straight, gin rickys, highballs and cocktails will get the slamming of their lives on Feb. 2 next, when the combined Protestant clergy of the State will raise its voice against rum.

The day has been designated in New Jersey church circles as "local option day." The ministers believe that if a local option bill can be passed through the Legislature, that New Jersey, except in isolated spots like thirty places of the Hoboken type, will speedily go "dry." Even in Hoboken the Protestant clergy will lift its voice, and try to stamp out the city's rum.

A Day of Thirst.
From early morning until late at night prayers will be going up all over New Jersey on Feb. 2. Each of the State's 1,000 churches will be ringing with the drinking fountains along the highways may forsake the shrine of rum.

Encouraged by the fact that many of the Southern States have gone "dry," prohibitionists in New Jersey are prepared from another fight on their lives. It is estimated that something like 40,000 laymen and 20,000 church people will be lifting their voices in a monster prayer that has as its object the annihilation of the liquor traffic.

Not alone that, but every Protestant clergyman in the State is expected to fight it out with rum from the pulpit on that day. As most Protestant churches hold two services a day, and some more, 800 sermons against drink will resound through New Jersey. Battering will come from an hour, it means that if an evangelist after a year's work in a town, the prohibitionists would go on for its day, and almost two months without a let up.

Dealers Alarmed.
Efforts are being made to get the Catholic clergy to support the vote of temperance on Feb. 2, "local option day." The famous "Bible" bill was advocated by them, but it has been so flagrantly exposed that the Catholic clergy have about given up hope of helping things through agitation and it is doubtful if they will give more than a slight support to the fight against drink, and then only from a strictly religious standpoint.

The movement of the movement has frightened the liquor dealers of the State. Country liquor dealers' associations have been holding meetings, and they have agreed to hold a meeting on Feb. 2. If plans do not materialize, every liquor dealer's association in New Jersey will have members in every church in the State to bring back reports about what the clergy had to say and how the congregations took it.

old steelclack who fell from the top of a sixty-foot flagstaff he was climbing in Echo Park, the Bronx, died of his injuries at the Harmon Hospital late before death, and said the cold caused him to lose his hold and pitch down.

His fingers, he said, became numb before he knew it, and when he tried to descend he could not use them. His skull and three ribs were broken. It was while the boy was saving two or three morning that the accident occurred.

PHILIP, YOUR PAPA WANTS YOU AT HOME.

He and the Girls Miss Your Voice and the Music of Your Violin.

Eleven-year-old Philip Dearing, of No. 51 Bartholdi avenue, Jersey City, smuggled his violin from his home and left a note for his father, reading: "Pop, I am going to make a fortune."

Won't see me for a long time." That was July 4 last, and the boy's father, a widower, has had no tidings of the youngster since. He believes that Philip is in Brooklyn. He is broken hearted over the boy's continued absence.

Philip played the violin with skill for one of his years and loved the instrument. He performed several times in public and the applause he received, his father now thinks, turned his little head. The boy is declared to be exceptionally bright and has always grieved over the death of his mother. He has three pretty sisters who mourn for him, and they are praying every night that the morning will see him returned to them.

So, Philip, it is up to you to get back to Jersey City and make your papa and sisters happy. Your return will be the finest New Year's present you could give them.
